IN DETAIL:

Alan Johnson's remarkable journey began by leaving school at 15 to join the Labour Party in 1971. Rising through the ranks, he became General Secretary of the Communication Workers Union after several strategic mergers. Beyond his union work, he showcased his diverse talents as a Director of Unity Trust Bank plc and a member of Ruskin College Oxford's Governing Council. The political arena beckoned, and Johnson heeded the call. His political career saw him as Minister of State for Employment Relations, expanding to industries, and later as Secretary of State for Work and Pensions and education. He remained a dedicated Member of Parliament for Hull West and Hessle since 1997.

WHAT HE OFFERS YOU:

Alan Johnson is a bold and relevant speaker, unafraid to express controversial views. As a dedicated moderniser, he effectively manages the government's union connections, making him highly suited for the current economic and political climate.

HOW HE PRESENTS:

Alan Johnson is a masterful communicator, combining eloquence with a remarkable ability to deliver concise and informative speeches. With his wealth of media experience, he offers valuable insights into a wide range of current issues.
